Ilya Bitekhtin, also known as illocanblo, is an electronic musician and party thrower who curates the Nenormalizm netlabel and makes Saint-Petersburg's IDM Nights possible. The artist has been releasing his incredible works at numerous record labels around the world. His contributions have been a major factor in the growth of IDM culture, spreading it far and wide.

His new album, Liminal Rhythms, features a stunning collection of six original tracks and seventeen remixers from all around the world, making it a truly global collaboration of sound. illocanblo loves to play with soft synths and unlock their true potential.

The cover art for this release, inspired by the work of Felipe Pantone, perfectly captures the energy of illocanblo's music, combining elements from both traditional and modern art styles. Resonance video is a remarkable collaboration between the paper artist, Zoe Genders, who constructed a structure, and Dan Conway, who brought it to life through his projections. Their combined efforts have resulted in an impressive film.
